

PRAYERS BY EDWARD'S BIER

BEREAVED ALEXANDRA OFTEN VISITS DEAD KING.

Royal Mourners Will Walk After the coffin, borne on a Gun Carriage, to Westminster Hall—Hard Work for Visitors—Who's Who in the Parade.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, May 15.—A solemn vigil is being maintained continuously around the coffin of King Edward, in the Throne Room of Buckingham Palace. It will be kept up until the removal of the body to Westminster Hall on Tuesday for the public lying in state.

Picked men from the King's company of the Grenadier Guards stand motionless, with arms reversed, around the bier. They are relieved every hour, but although they are men of splendid physique the strain of maintaining their positions with heads bowed without moving a muscle of the body is extremely trying and produces in some instances faintness.

There was a religious service in the Throne Room to-night. Members of the royal family from time to time to pay tribute to the body. The Queen Mother a frequent in making these silent orisons. The silent statue-like soldiers alone witness her grief on these occasions.

While the official reports from the palace unite in stating that she is bearing up under her bereavement as well as can be expected in the circumstances, unofficial reports emanating from palace sources carry the intimation that she is not as well as she ought to be in order to face the strain, necessarily painful to her, of the many ceremonies of the week. Fear has been expressed that she may succumb to the strain at any moment before the final ceremonies of the interment at Windsor on Friday.

Of course the nerves of everybody at the palace, particularly of persons connected with the Queen Mother's suite, are in a state of extreme tension, which perhaps causes the news of what is really being done to be exaggerated. There is, however, some foundation for the dread that the Queen Mother's physical and nervous condition may at any moment be overstrained to the breaking point by any untoward incident, the possibilities of which are large throughout the numerous funeral services that are to be held during the week.

Queen Alexandra's grief when her husband's body was placed in the coffin before being transferred to the throne room was tragically intense. Palace officials describe it in whispers. As her general health has been good, however, it is hoped that she will pass the week of intense nervous strain without ill results. She is the idol of England, and her collapse would shock the nation almost as much as has the tragically sudden death of King Edward.

The royal family attended service in the palace chapel to-day. The foreign diplomats and members of the royal household are to be admitted to the throne room to-morrow. They have all received special invitations.

The official arrangements for the removal of the King's body to Westminster Hall were made public to-night. King George with his two eldest sons will walk in procession immediately behind the gun carriage on which the coffin will be borne. The foreign royalties now here, as well as the male members of the British royal family, will also follow on foot. Queen Mary, the Queen Mother and the other women of the royal family and their suites will drive in carriages.

The orders for the funeral procession on May 26 have not yet been issued, and until they are officially published the solution of the problem of precedence of the foreign delegates will not be known. Besides the precedence of rank there is the precedence of kinship to be considered. These are questions concerning which courts and Governments are extremely punctilious, and unpremeditated offences may easily be given.

The position in the procession of the representatives of the two great republics, France and the United States, is a matter of some speculation. It is understood that according to rank and kinship decide that next to King George will come the Kaiser, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Duke of Cornwall, Prince Arthur of Connaught, the Kings of Greece, Denmark, Spain, Norway, Portugal and Belgium and the Grand Duke Michael, representing the Czar; these being followed by Mr. Roosevelt and M. Poincaré, the French Foreign Minister, with the other members of the French delegation.

The republican representatives would thus have precedence of the Austrian, Italian, Netherlands, Swedish and Japanese delegates, and many other representatives of monarchies. It is believed that the representatives of the British overseas dominions will enjoy for the first time places recognizing their individual importance. Hitherto they have been assumed to be represented by British functionaries on state occasions, the result being that while Montenegro, for example, has had a specific place as a public function, Canada and Australia have not been represented. It is stated that King George intends to alter this.

Memorial Service for King Edward.

A service in memory of King Edward was held yesterday at St. Matthew's P. E. Church, at 26 West Eighty-fourth street. The pastor, the Rev. Arthur H. Judge, invited members of the church of the South to attend. There were about 600 persons at the service. The Rev. Mr. Judge devoted his sermon to a eulogy of the late King.

THE JUDGES CONUNDRUM.

Why Are Street Women Arrested Only South of Forty-second Street?

Magistrate Herrman put this question to the police in the night court last night. "Are all the street women who are arrested picked up south of Forty-second street?"

Magistrate said he knew by his own observation that many of the same sort of women were picked up north of that boundary. He added that the last fifteen days that he spent on the bench of the night court practically all the women arrested before him had been arrested north of Forty-second street. He asked the police to look into the matter. The closing quotations, including the "bid and asked" prices, with a list of the news matter, are contained also in the night edition of THE EVENING SUN.

KING VICTOR HEARS PEARY.

Italian Geographical Society Gives Medals to Explorer and Capt. Bartlett.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

ROME, May 15.—The hall of the Roman College was decorated with American and Italian flags for Commander Peary's lecture to-day. The hall was overcrowded. King Victor Emmanuel and the Duke of the Abruzzi attended. The explorer was presented by the president of the Geographical Society.

It was announced that the society had awarded its gold medal to Commander Peary and a silver replica to Capt. Bartlett, the Nova Scotian who commanded the steamer Roosevelt on the expedition. Commander Peary in acknowledging the honor said he had merely profited by the experience of his predecessors, among whom the Duke of the Abruzzi and Cogni were foremost. Hence his success was shared by them.

The secretary of the Geographical Society read an Italian translation of Mr. Peary's address. The audience followed the reading with close attention and frequently interrupted with applause. After the lecture the King and the Duke of the Abruzzi heartily congratulated Commander Peary and shook hands with all the Peary party. Commander Peary and those accompanying him will leave Rome to-night.

She and the chauffeur who had travelled here with her should return immediately to Italy. ENTIRE FAMILY DEAD IN FIRE

PETRO LARNICO, WIFE AND TWO CHILDREN LOSE LIVES.

Incendiary Blaze in a Williamsburg Fire Trap Has Fatal Results—Police and Firemen Have a Difficult Task to Rescue Other Tenants in the House.

A family of Italians died early yesterday morning in a tenement house fire at 144 Hamburg avenue, Williamsburg. The victims were Petro Larnico, 40 years old; his wife, Rosie, aged 36, and two children, Jennie, 12 years, and Bessie, 8. They occupied two front rooms on one side of the upper floor of the building and were probably suffocated by smoke before the flames reached them.

The building was a four story frame with a vacant store on one side of the ground floor. On the other side Morris Fuchs had a candy and tobacco store. He lived on one side of the floor above with his wife and four small children, ranging in age from 5 to 12 years. On the opposite side lived the family of Joseph Frainco, while the next floor was tenanted by families of Antonio Palanini and Tony Cingemanni, and on the fourth floor, besides the Larnico family, lived the family of Ciro Fromeno. The house is next to one on the corner of Suydam street.

The fire started in the lower hall near the foot of the stairs and was probably of incendiary origin. It was discovered by some citizens who were passing at 2:35 A. M. and when they raised an alarm it brought Policemen Quinn of the Hamburg avenue station.

Meanwhile some of the inmates of the building were aroused by the cry of fire. The men began to discharge revolvers from front windows to attract attention. Sergt. Manell and Policemen Donnelly and Swanson were at Bushwick Park, a block away, when they heard the noise. They had to dodge the bullets as they ran to the place by ducking into doorways.

The three policemen with Quinn, who had turned in an alarm, hastened to the building. Although the hall and stairs were ablaze the four men dashed through the fire and smoke to the upper floors. They dragged the tenants on the second floor to the small corner over the store. From there the tenants were helped to adjoining buildings. Meantime Police Captain Baker, who was about to retire to his bedroom in the police station two blocks away, rushed to the place in his slippers and without hat or coat. He shouted for the dozen policemen in the vicinity to follow him.

The flames had burst from front and rear windows and the four policemen who had first entered the house were on the third floor helping the tenants to the rear fire escape. Capt. Becker and his reserves got into the building through an adjoining house and by way of the roof. The curtain and the men got down to the top floor and dragged the members of the Fromeno family down to the floor below and out to the rear fire escape.

By that time Engine 18, stationed two blocks away, was on the scene, and the firemen quickly raised ladders in front. By going through an alley on Suydam street they got another ladder into the building and placed it against the fire escape. The flames spread up to the third floor and the heat was so intense and the smoke so stifling that the police gave way to the firemen who dashed down the hall.

It was thought that in the rush to get out the Larnico family had been rescued. Tenants in the house told policemen and firemen that they had seen Larnico with his wife and children going down the stairs and out upon the store cornice to an adjoining building. Satisfied at this statement that every one of the occupants were accounted for, the firemen kept the blaze confined to the house where it started. The building, which was very old, burned like tinder and when the fire was extinguished it left a blackened shell. The firemen entered to investigate the amount of damage.

While the firemen were going through the rooms which the Larnico family occupied they discovered that the father and later were succumbed to the smoke. He was dead and the body was badly burned. In an adjoining bedroom the firemen found Mrs. Larnico with her youngest child clamped in her arms. It is believed that she was praying when death overtook her and her child. The other child was found dead under the bed where she had evidently crawled.

It was the opinion of the firemen that Larnico had probably tried to reach the front window to shout for help when he and his family succumbed to the smoke. He was dead and the body was badly burned. In an adjoining bedroom the firemen found Mrs. Larnico with her youngest child clamped in her arms. It is believed that she was praying when death overtook her and her child. The other child was found dead under the bed where she had evidently crawled.

The District Attorney ended his letter to Mr. Prendergast by saying he believed the retention of the telephone was a matter of wise economy and that he believed the Comptroller would agree and recommend the payment of the claims.

BARK BACK AT CITY WATCHDOG

the rule of his office is that whenever members of the office force use a telephone for personal business the cost is charged up to the individual and deducted from the telephone bills charged to the county. He thought Comptroller Prendergast would appreciate that neither telephone referred to was installed either for the personal convenience or the financial advantage of himself or Mr. Hamill, who is attached to the homicide bureau of the District Attorney's office.

The duties of a District Attorney, says Judge Whitman, are not confined to certain hours. He and his assistants are kept on the jump weekdays, Sundays and holidays. He has been busy early and late, without regard to regular hours, and in order to keep in touch with the large and increasing amount of criminal business devolving on his office.

"I have deemed it advisable," wrote the District Attorney, "to keep at my residence a complete list of my staff, including their telephone numbers, in order that the members thereof may be promptly summoned during the night, Sundays or holidays, as occasion demands. As District Attorney of this county it is clearly within my power to contract for said telephone service or to do that which in my judgment is necessary for the performance of my public duties as a county officer, and I have no doubt that after a careful consideration of this matter you will concur with the decisions of the courts as to the discretionary power conferred on the District Attorney in all matters pertaining to the management of said office."

Mr. Whitman, having looked up the law and precedents, refers the Comptroller to them, mentioning the Grout-Jerome case and Gardner vs. Supervisors, 134 N. Y. 1.

"So far as I am personally concerned," the District Attorney continued, "I live in an apartment house and have the telephone service in my apartment, which I much prefer for my own use. The private wire which has been installed in my apartment by the city is for the use of the Police Department, the Coroner's office, my own assistants, especially the homicide bureau, and for official business only."

A home phone is particularly necessary for Hamill, he informs the Comptroller, because Hamill, as an attaché of the Homicide Bureau, is always informed by the police when a murder has been committed, night or day, or when a person has died or is likely to die under suspicious circumstances. It is Hamill's business to get the history of the case over the phone, give the police the necessary instructions concerning the separation of defendant and witnesses, etc., and communicate with the Deputy Assistant District Attorney on duty at that particular time. He gives a history of the case to the Deputy Assistant over the phone and arranges by phone to meet the Deputy Assistant either at the place the crime was committed or at the station house in the precinct from which the call was made.

The number of cases reported over telephone 3399 Melrose (Mr. Hamill's average," the District Attorney writes, "about four a night all the year round. As an instance of the work accomplished, on Sunday, April 10, 1910, the homicide bureau of this office covered five cases of homicide, being continuously engaged from 9 A. M. on Sunday until 3 A. M. on Monday, April 11. It should be here noted that while the Deputy Assistant and Mr. Hamill were engaged at this work telephone calls were received at Mr. Hamill's residence from Police Headquarters notifying him of the new cases as they were reported, and this information in turn was sent by some person in Mr. Hamill's residence to Mr. Hamill at whichever police station he then happened to be.

"The final result of this work is that the people's interests are being taken care of in a manner reflecting great credit upon the county of New York, in that all this work of the homicide bureau is performed without extra cost to the county, with the exception of the small expense incurred for telephone service."

The District Attorney ended his letter to Mr. Prendergast by saying he believed the retention of the telephone was a matter of wise economy and that he believed the Comptroller would agree and recommend the payment of the claims.

There was a storm of applause and twice the audience gave three cheers for Mayor Gaynor. One enthusiast shouted for "the next Governor of this State." Mayor Schuchman made a brief address of thanks and appreciation to the Mayor. The Mayor bowed himself out and the regular business of the convention began. There was such a demand for admission to the hall that long lines were formed at the entrance even long after Mayor Gaynor had withdrawn. There are a good many delegates from the far South and West and some of them brought their wives with them for a visit to the metropolis.

The grand master's report recommended the establishment of a sanatorium for members suffering from tuberculosis. The income of the order for the year was reported as $484,571.11.

GAYNOR PRAISES THE JEWS

SPEAKS AT CONVENTION OF ORDER B'NITH ABRAHAM.

Says It Would Be Better for the City if He Were Resting-Hailed as Next Governor The Jew in Politics He Thinks Has Been a Good Judge of Men.

Mayor Gaynor delivered the opening address yesterday morning at the twenty-fourth annual convention of the Independent Order B'Nith Abraham in Cooper Union, where the convention will sit for three days. The order has grown in numbers by 15,000 the last year and now has 100,000 members in all parts of the Union, divided among 573 lodges. Delegates from all parts of the country are in attendance at the convention, to the number of more than 1,100. Mayor Gaynor was introduced by the grand master of the order, Judge Leon Sanders, as "the greatest, the best Mayor New York city ever had," and there was much applause.

"I thank you very much for inviting me here," said the Mayor, "although I ought to say to you that after the labors of the week I ought to be somewhere else. It would be better for the city if not for you if I were somewhere else taking care of my health."

There was so much hubbub that the Mayor at this point abruptly ceased speaking, and as the noise did not lessen he remarked: "Perhaps I'd better wait—After much effort on the part of the chairman the doors were finally closed and nobody else was admitted during the Mayor's speech. When quiet had been secured, and not until then, the Mayor said:

"As I arrived this morning I heard so much noise that I was reminded of the political meetings of last fall. Everybody was talking. Now if you will keep still a few minutes and give me a chance to get a word in edgeways we'll get the thing over sooner."

After that Mayor Gaynor had silence and attention, and he told the delegates that he took them to be the most intelligent people of their race. He said:

I suppose that many of you were born in this country and that many more of you were born in countries of Europe where your race is oppressed. There is an old saying that you can hire one half the people to shoot down the other half. That is the reliance of despotism everywhere. In a country of universal education that does not hold good. That is the contrary of the oppression of the Jew in all Europe. In Asia he has never been so treated, only in Christian Europe, where it was an outcome of religious hatred. Yet when an intelligent man appeared who said what happened. The greatest of English rulers, Oliver Cromwell, admitted the Jews to England after a banishment of 400 years. Mirabeau gave them full freedom in France and Napoleon revived the ancient Sanhedrin and gave the rabbis all the rank and privileges of the priesthood. In fact of these how pure appears the Czar! But of course he is only an instrument.

The founder of this rapidly growing race is human or divine, came of the Jewish race. We Christians have appropriated the Scriptures of the Jews and declared them to be God's words. Why in the light of these things should a Christian hate a Jew? Happily in this country there lingers scarcely any of this ancient feeling. We are indebted to the Jews on every hand. Think what we owe to Heine, Mendelssohn and Rubinstein, Ricardo, Spinoza, Mephistophe and de Hirsch, Jessel and Benjamin and Disraeli. The Jewish faith has remained pure in the worship of one Supreme Being and has never been carried aside to make room for some other deity. The same basis, or has not that been its basis from the beginning? Well may a Jew be proud of it and adhere to it everywhere.

You have the finest body of literature in the whole world, your ancient Scriptures which we call the Old Testament. For all that goes into the making of the Jewish race stands supreme. Since the Hebrew Scriptures were written no mind has come on this earth who has equaled them. No man has come on this earth since the Twenty-third Psalm was written who was capable of writing anything anywhere near equal to it. And yet these early days the mind of man was little.

In the work of this order I honor you for standing together in the manner that you do. In politics you have never been small and clamorous but have spread yourselves out according to the individual preferences. You are not except the good of the city. We have a good many of you in this city. In fact, as we say, there are more Jews here than in Jerusalem. And when these have been put before you who stood for good government, your discretion in your vote has been admirable. And more admirable still has been your support of those whom you elected to give you good government, without being deceived by those who all the time are looking only for themselves and do not care a rap for the city.

We welcome you here because you come in the spirit of doing good, and I give you a hearty welcome.

There was a storm of applause and twice the audience gave three cheers for Mayor Gaynor. One enthusiast shouted for "the next Governor of this State." Mayor Schuchman made a brief address of thanks and appreciation to the Mayor. The Mayor bowed himself out and the regular business of the convention began. AUTO HIT BY A TRAIN.

Seaboard Air Line Express Hits a Machine Near Railway—Driver's Leg Broken.

RAHWAY, May 15.—The Seaboard Air Line express on the Pennsylvania Railroad hit an automobile this afternoon at the Colonia crossing three miles west of this place. George Schultz of Perth Amboy, who was driving the automobile, had a leg fractured and was badly bruised but not hurt fatally. The machine was wrecked. No damage was done to the locomotive and the train proceeded.

Schultz had a machine from a garage in Perth Amboy marked "28 M. N. J." which he had taken to the Colonia crossing to let a freight train, also west-bound, pass. When it was over he was crossing the tracks and was struck by the rear of the train, which was behind the freight. The express just clipped the rear part of his machine, hurling it over and throwing him out.

His Affliction Exaggerated.

A young man staggered weakly into the West Sixty-eighth street police station early yesterday morning, leaning on the arm of a friend, who announced to the desk: "This man has smallpox."

Lieut. Jackson hurried to suggest that it would be well to take the man away to his home, which the announcing stranger said was at 202 West Sixty-ninth street. This was done. Later a diagnostician from the Board of Health said it was chickenpox, not smallpox. The sick man is a Cuban, Juan Iglesias, 19 years old.

BLUE DEVILS AFTER HIM.

Man From South Boston Stirs Up Jersey City to Escape Them.

A six footer, describing himself as John A. Walker, 33 years old, an engineer living at 175 Broadway, South Boston, ran up the front stoop of a three story and basement brick house at 239 Barrow street, Jersey City, at 3:10 o'clock yesterday morning and nearly yanked the door bell out of place. Mrs. David C. Lee, a colored woman who runs the place, opened the door and Walker rushed in.

"Oh, can't you save me from the howling mob which is at my heels?" he implored. "They'll kill me if they get me." Mrs. Lee was unable to quiet the man until she assured him that if he would go outside she would let him in at the basement door and call upon her boarder to help him. As soon as Walker walked out she locked the door, ran to the bedroom window and called for help.

Walker got busy again when he heard the scream and pounded the front door with his shoulders, forcing it open. He ran through a doorway and locked himself in Mrs. Lee's bathroom. Policemen George Sanders arrived a few minutes later and burst open the bathroom door, but the man from South Boston was missing. He had escaped down a crawlspace through a small window and dropping ten feet to the roof of a shed which extends to the walls of the adjoining house facing Bright street. Sanders went to the street and blew the whistle. Policemen Tom Devine responded and both policemen ran to the rear yard with revolvers drawn to round up the six footer.

Meanwhile Walker climbed on a trunk which stood on the roof and rappelled on the window of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman's apartments on the second floor of the Bright street house. Mrs. Freeman responded to the rap and promptly opened the door. Mr. Freeman came out of bed, punched Walker in the jaw and toppled him off the trunk. The man from South Boston then jumped to the ground and climbed over a series of small sheds by means of a ladder which he carried with him.

Sanders finally found Walker sitting on the edge of a roof shed with his feet dangling over and ordered him to drop his pants and being shot at by him, he expressed great pleasure that the police had come to his assistance. He was taken to the City Hall station and sent from there to the City Hospital. The doctor said that the man was in a state of delirium tremens, as he was suffering from delirium tremens, and was shipped him to the city prison. He was locked up as disorderly.

KILLS GIRL AND HERSELF.

Act of Insane Wife of Chief of Police of Baldwinville, N. Y.

SYRACUSE, May 15.—After murdering her fifteen-year-old daughter, Hazel, Mrs. Emma Chapman, 47 years of age, wife of Chief of Police Charles F. Chapman of Baldwinville, at an early hour this morning committed suicide. The dual tragedy was enacted at the Chapman home in Baldwinville where a revolver Chief Chapman had hidden in an old coat on his return home from his night's duty.
